Executive Summary

Warren AI

CoStar Group Inc. (NASDAQ: CSGP) is a leading provider of online real estate marketplaces, information, analytics, and 3D digital twin technology serving both commercial and residential property markets across the U.S. and internationally through brands including CoStar Suite, LoopNet, Apartments.com, and Homes.com.

Q1 2026 marked CoStar's 60th consecutive quarter of double-digit revenue growth, with revenue rising 23% year-over-year to $897 million — slightly missing the $897.47 million consensus — while adjusted EBITDA of $132 million doubled year-over-year and beat guidance by 26%. EPS of $0.23 surpassed the $0.18 forecast by 27.78%. Management raised full-year adjusted EBITDA guidance to $780M–$820M and increased adjusted EPS guidance to $1.32–$1.39, while reaffirming revenue guidance of $3.78B–$3.82B.

A major strategic development is CoStar's $800 million cash acquisition of Zonda, a new home construction data and homebuilder software platform serving over 3,000 North American customers with a 104% net retention rate. The deal is expected to close in H2 2026 and be accretive to adjusted EPS in the first full year. The residential segment, led by Homes.com (revenue +58% YoY) and Apartments.com (revenue +10% YoY), is on track to reach profitability in Q2 2026. Internationally, CoStar UK grew revenue 25%, Canada 22%, and France is set to launch in Q2.

Despite strong operational momentum, the stock has declined approximately 65% over the past year, hitting a 52-week low of $28.18, weighed down by heavy investment spending, Nasdaq-100 removal, activist investor scrutiny, and a challenging real estate macro environment. The company executed $505 million in share repurchases in Q1 alone under a $1.5 billion buyback program. Fair value is estimated at ~$40.85 versus the ~$30 current price, with analyst targets ranging from $26 to $70 (median $47.50). Forward P/E compresses sharply to ~21.9x for FY26 and ~16.9x for FY27, suggesting improving earnings leverage ahead.

Bull Case

- CoStar achieved its 60th consecutive quarter of double-digit revenue growth in Q1 '26, with total revenue up 23% YoY to $897M and adjusted EBITDA doubling to $132M, demonstrating durable operational momentum.
- The residential segment is on track to reach profitability in Q2 '26, with Homes.com revenue surging 58% YoY and agent membership growing 205% YoY to 35,175 subscribers, each generating an average $36,400 more in commissions post-enrollment — an 11x ROI on their subscription.
- The $800M Zonda acquisition adds a subscription-based new home construction data platform with 104% net retention and 3,000+ customers, expected to be EPS-accretive in the first full year and complementing CoStar's existing residential and commercial data ecosystem.
- Management raised FY'26 adjusted EBITDA guidance by $30M at the midpoint and increased adjusted EPS guidance to $1.32–$1.39, driven by AI-enabled cost efficiencies and accelerated share repurchases (11.4M shares for $505M in Q1 alone under a $1.5B program).
- Forward valuation compresses significantly: P/E drops from ~490x (trailing) to ~21.9x (FY'26E) and ~16.9x (FY'27E), while EV/EBITDA falls to ~15x in FY'26 and ~11.7x in FY'27, suggesting the stock may be materially undervalued at current levels relative to earnings trajectory.

Bear Case

- The stock has declined ~65% over the past year and hit a 52-week low of $28.18, reflecting persistent investor skepticism around the Homes.com investment payback timeline, heavy spending, and removal from the Nasdaq-100 index in May '26, which triggered passive fund selling.
- Net new bookings of $67M in Q1 '26, while up 20% YoY, represent the third consecutive sequential quarterly decline, raising concerns about sales force productivity, particularly within the still-nascent Homes.com inside sales team.
- CoStar faces multiple federal antitrust class-action lawsuits alleging monopolistic practices in commercial real estate data markets, as well as litigation with Zillow over MLS data access — outcomes could impose significant legal costs, management distraction, or mandated business practice changes.
- The residential segment still posted negative adjusted EBITDA of -$29M in Q1 '26, and the company plans to invest $550M net into Homes.com in '26 alone, compressing near-term free cash flow (FCF yield near zero) and profitability ratings (3/10 per internal scoring).
- Macroeconomic headwinds persist: U.S. apartment construction starts fell 73% from their '22 peak to the lowest level since '11, and the broader CRE market remains challenged by elevated interest rates and low transaction volumes, directly pressuring core CoStar Suite and LoopNet demand.

Additional Insights

- CoStar's contract renewal rate has held at 89% for 7 consecutive quarters, rising to 95% for customers with 5+ years of tenure, underscoring the stickiness of its subscription model; annual contract revenue represented 73% of Q1 '26 total revenue.
- Matterport, acquired in Feb '25, is becoming a key cross-platform differentiator: listings with Matterport 3D tours on Apartments.com generated 56x more tour requests and renters spent 46% more time on those listings; subscription revenue grew 19% YoY in Q1 '26.
- Homes.com AI users spend ~18 minutes on-site vs. 4.5 minutes for non-AI users, run 4x more searches, and submit 7x more leads — metrics management views as a leading indicator of meaningful consumer share shift ahead of monetization acceleration.
- 13 of 15 EPS revisions over the past 90 days were upward, and analyst EPS forecasts project 56% YoY growth in FY'26, 32% in FY'27, and 25% in FY'28, reflecting growing confidence in CoStar's earnings inflection despite near-term stock weakness.
- OnTheMarket (UK) has eclipsed Zoopla as the #2 portal by inventory, with 23 consecutive months of positive net new bookings; CoStar UK revenue grew 25% and net new bookings grew 44% YoY in Q1 '26, highlighting international momentum.

SWOT Analysis

Warren AI

Strengths

- CoStar holds ~80% market share in commercial real estate data, underpinned by a proprietary database built over 40 years with 2.4 trillion data fields and 1,500+ dedicated researchers, creating a near-insurmountable data moat.
- Over 95% of revenue is subscription-based with strong renewal rates (~89–95%), providing highly predictable and recurring cash flows; the company holds more cash than debt and liquid assets exceed short-term obligations.
- A portfolio of 27+ globally recognized brands — including CoStar Suite, LoopNet, Apartments.com, and Homes.com — attracts over 150 million unique monthly visitors and spans commercial, residential, and international markets.

Weaknesses

- Heavy investment in Homes.com ($550M net planned for '26) and ongoing integration of acquisitions (Matterport, Domain, Zonda) compress near-term profitability, with FCF yield near zero and a profitability rating of just 3/10.
- The trailing P/E of ~490x and elevated EV/EBITDA reflect years of depressed earnings relative to revenue scale; the stock trades at a high earnings multiple despite the significant price decline.
- Homes.com's inside sales force remains largely inexperienced (most reps have under one year of tenure), contributing to sequential booking softness and uncertainty around near-term revenue acceleration.

Opportunities

- Successful Homes.com monetization — including the May '26 subscription price increase, field sales expansion into new cities, and Zonda integration — could unlock a massive residential addressable market and drive ARPU materially higher.
- International expansion into France (Q2 '26 launch), Australia (CoStar/LoopNet Q3–Q4 '26), and Italy (Wikicasa stake) taps into a global CRE information and marketplace TAM estimated at over $100 billion.
- AI integration across all platforms (Homes AI, Apartments AI, CoStar Rent Benchmark, Matterport Exteriors with X-ray) can deepen consumer engagement, improve lead quality, and drive operating leverage through internal automation and cost efficiencies.

Threats

- Multiple federal antitrust class-action lawsuits alleging monopolistic practices in CRE data markets, combined with Zillow MLS litigation, pose material legal, financial, and reputational risks that could reshape data-sharing norms.
- Intense 'Portal Wars' competition from Zillow, Redfin, and Google's expanding home listings via Enhanced Local Services Ads threatens Homes.com's user acquisition economics and could extend the investment payback timeline.
- Macroeconomic sensitivity remains high: elevated interest rates, subdued CRE transaction volumes, and apartment construction starts at 15-year lows directly pressure demand across CoStar's core commercial and residential platforms.

Earnings Call - Q1 2026

04/28/26 | WarrenAI

- Q1 '26 marked CoStar's 60th consecutive quarter of double-digit revenue growth, with revenue of $897M (+23% YoY) at the high end of guidance and adjusted EBITDA of $132M doubling YoY and beating guidance by $17M.
- Adjusted EPS of $0.23 significantly exceeded guidance; management raised full-year '26 adjusted EBITDA guidance to $780M-$820M (+$30M at midpoint) and increased adjusted EPS guidance to $1.32-$1.39.

Bullish Highlights

- Homes.com revenue grew 58% YoY to $26M in Q1 '26, with 35,175 agent subscribers (up 205% YoY), 76% on annual contracts, and a March annualized revenue run rate of $106M (+92% YoY).
- Homes.com member agents earned an average of $36,400 more in commissions in their first year — an 11x ROI on their ~$3,400 average annual subscription — providing strong justification for a May '26 price increase.
- Homes AI users spend 18 minutes on-site vs. 4.5 minutes for non-AI users, run 4x more searches, and submit 7x more leads, indicating a powerful engagement advantage ahead of broader monetization.
- CoStar UK net new bookings grew 44% YoY and LoopNet European unique visitors more than doubled to 900,000+, demonstrating strong international momentum.

Bearish Highlights

- Revenue of $897M slightly missed the $897.47M consensus estimate, raising questions about near-term sales execution.
- Net new bookings of $67M in Q1 '26 represent the third consecutive sequential quarterly decline, with the Homes.com inside sales force still largely inexperienced and productivity ramping slowly.
- Residential adjusted EBITDA remained negative at -$29M in Q1 '26, and the company plans to invest $550M net into Homes.com in '26, keeping FCF constrained.
- Apartments.com revenue growth moderated to 10% YoY in Q1 '26, with management acknowledging that re-acceleration requires continued sales force expansion.

Q&A Highlights

- On bookings math (KBW): CFO Lown clarified that ~40% of '26 revenue growth comes from acquisitions/non-subscription sources; subscription revenue needs to grow ~$1B in total between '27 and '28, with Homes.com expected to grow meaningfully faster than other brands.
- On Apartments.com pricing mix (Citi): Management noted that rooftops won from Rent.com's bankruptcy tend to be lower-ARPU properties, which has modestly pressured average revenue per unit for several quarters.
- On Homes.com pricing strategy (Jefferies): CEO Florance indicated close rates for well-trained sales reps exceed 50%, justifying the May '26 price increase for new subscribers while still targeting member count growth.
- On sequential bookings decline (Baird): Management attributed the trend partly to Q1 seasonality, the rookie status of the Homes.com sales force, and noted that Q2 is historically the strongest bookings quarter, with Apartmentalize trade show as a key catalyst.

Misses

- Q1 '26 revenue of $897M missed the consensus estimate of $897.47M, a marginal but notable shortfall given the company's long track record of meeting or exceeding top-line guidance.
- Net new bookings declined sequentially for the third straight quarter, falling short of investor expectations given the significant sales force investments made throughout '25.
- The Homes.com inside sales team continues to underperform relative to field sales reps, with management acknowledging ongoing work to tighten value propositions and improve productivity for that cohort.
