Executive Summary

Warren AI

GoDaddy Inc. (NYSE: GDDY) is a leading domain registration, web hosting, and business software solutions provider serving over 20 million customers across more than 200 markets globally. The company operates as the world's largest domain registrar, managing over 80 million domains, and has been strategically pivoting toward higher-margin AI-powered products and Applications & Commerce (A&C) services.

From a recent performance standpoint, GoDaddy delivered Q1 2026 revenue of $1.3 billion (up 6% YoY), reaching the high end of guidance, with EPS of $1.60 beating the $1.52 forecast by 5.26%. Normalized EBITDA grew 13% to $414 million with 210 basis points of margin expansion, and free cash flow surged 15% to $474 million. The company reaffirmed full-year 2026 revenue guidance of $5.195B-$5.275B (~6% growth) and a free cash flow target of ~$1.8 billion.

On the AI front, GoDaddy's Airo AI Builder rapidly scaled to $10M+ in annualized bookings within weeks of beta launch, and Airo cohorts show ~30% faster second-product attachment versus non-Airo cohorts. The company is also pioneering Agent Name Service (ANS) as a new digital identity layer for the agentic internet, leveraging its domain leadership.

However, significant headwinds persist. The stock has fallen roughly 58% from its 52-week high of ~$179, hitting a 52-week low near $72. A securities law investigation by Kaplan Fox & Kilsheimer LLP into promotional domain pricing disclosures, heavy insider selling (22 sales, zero purchases over six months), and bookings deceleration driven by one-year promotional domain strategies have weighed heavily on sentiment. Near-term guidance disappointed the market, and ARR of $4.3B slightly missed some estimates.

Analyst targets range widely from $83 (low) to $190 (high), with a median near $112. JPMorgan maintained Overweight but cut its target to $124, while Raymond James holds a Strong Buy at $100. Technically, the stock screens as a Strong Buy on moving averages, and the forward P/E of ~9.45x and PEG of 0.63 suggest potential undervaluation relative to earnings growth.

Bull Case

- Airo AI Builder scaled to $10M+ in annualized bookings within weeks of beta launch without dedicated marketing, with paid marketing ramping in Q2 2026 and distribution expanding through GoDaddy.com's large domain and website funnels.
- Airo cohorts demonstrate high-teens percentage growth in cumulative annual spend and ~30% faster second-product attachment velocity versus non-Airo cohorts, indicating meaningfully higher customer lifetime value.
- Q1 26 free cash flow grew 15% to $474M, with trailing 12-month FCF of $1.68B; the company targets ~$1.8B for full-year 26, on track to exceed its 20% FCF CAGR North Star, supported by a forward FCF yield of ~14%.
- The A&C segment, now ~40% of total revenue, grew 12% YoY in Q1 26 with 45% EBITDA margins, providing a high-margin growth engine that offsets slower core platform growth.
- Share repurchases have reduced fully diluted shares by over 31% since 2022 (to 133M shares), with >95% of FCF deployed to buybacks, creating significant per-share value accretion. Management's continued buybacks signal confidence in intrinsic value.
- Forward P/E of ~9.45x for FY26 and PEG ratio of 0.63 suggest the stock is attractively valued relative to near-term earnings growth, with analyst EPS forecasts of $9.37 (FY26), $9.92 (FY27), and $10.49 (FY28).

Bear Case

- The stock has declined ~58% from its 52-week high of ~$179.61, hitting a 52-week low near $71.59, with a securities law investigation by Kaplan Fox & Kilsheimer LLP into promotional domain pricing disclosures adding legal and reputational risk.
- Bookings growth decelerated to 3% in Q1 26, impacted by the promotional one-year domain strategy, .co registry contract expiration, and lapping of prior-year aftermarket strength; recovery to parity with revenue growth is expected but unproven.
- Insider selling has been heavily one-sided, with 22 sales and zero purchases over the past six months, including CFO Mark McCaffrey selling 3,500 shares in June 26, signaling potential lack of internal conviction at current prices.
- Full-year 26 revenue guidance of ~6% growth and domain/business segment growth of only ~2.5% at midpoint fell below market expectations, raising concerns about core business maturation and whether the domain industry recovery has plateaued.
- AI initiatives, while promising, remain early-stage and immaterial to near-term financials; execution risks in scaling Airo AI Builder, ANS adoption, and Websites + Marketing upgrades could delay the expected monetization inflection.
- Competitive pressures from Shopify, Wix, Squarespace, and Cloudflare, combined with rising Verisign registry fees (effective Nov 26) and the FTC data security order, create margin and market share headwinds.

Additional Insights

- GoDaddy's Agent Name Service (ANS) initiative positions domains as the identity layer for the agentic internet via DNS, with thousands of non-GoDaddy agents already registered and 2 partnerships signed in Q1 26; this could extend domain relevance into a new infrastructure paradigm.
- Airo Care, GoDaddy's AI-native support platform, improved resolution rates by ~50% in initial tests and equalized performance between English and non-English markets (improving non-English resolution by >150%), now deployed across 50+ markets and 20 languages—potentially accelerating international growth.
- GoDaddy's revised Universal Terms of Service (effective Feb 26) reclassifying all users as 'business customers' could limit consumer protection rights, increase dispute resolution costs, and drive churn among personal-use customers.
- The FTC finalized an order in May 25 requiring GoDaddy to implement a comprehensive information-security program following alleged data security failures between 2019–2022, imposing ongoing compliance costs and third-party audit requirements.
- Technical analysis rates the stock a Strong Buy on both moving averages and technical indicators, with fair value estimated at $128.76 versus the current price of ~$88.51, implying ~45% upside; InvestingPro estimates fair value at $122.93.

SWOT Analysis

WarrenAI

Strengths

- World's largest domain registrar with 80M+ domains under management across 200+ markets, providing a massive low-cost customer acquisition funnel and strong brand recognition.
- Durable subscription-based recurring revenue model with >85% customer retention, ARR of $4.3B growing 6% YoY, and ARPU of $246 (up 9% YoY) driven by attach and pricing initiatives.
- Strong free cash flow generation ($1.68B trailing 12-month) with normalized EBITDA-to-FCF conversion greater than 1:1, supporting aggressive share buybacks and balance sheet flexibility ($1.3B cash, $2.3B total liquidity).
- A&C segment (40% of revenue) growing at low double digits with 45% EBITDA margins, providing a high-margin growth engine and reducing dependence on commoditized domain registration.

Weaknesses

- Bookings growth (3% in Q1 26) consistently lagging revenue growth signals near-term demand deceleration; one-year promotional domain strategy creates timing mismatches in revenue recognition and deferred revenue.
- Core platform segment growing only 3% YoY, with domain/business segment guided at ~2.5% growth for FY26, reflecting potential saturation in the foundational business.
- High Price/Book multiple and negative book value in prior years reflect significant leverage from share repurchases; short-term obligations exceeding liquid assets is flagged as a financial health concern.
- No dividend paid, and AI monetization remains early-stage with immaterial near-term financial contribution despite significant investment in compute, marketing, and product development.

Opportunities

- Airo AI Builder and Airo for WordPress represent significant untapped monetization potential; distribution through GoDaddy.com's large domain and website funnels has barely begun, and paid marketing is only ramping in Q2 26.
- ANS could establish GoDaddy as the identity infrastructure provider for the agentic internet, leveraging its position as the world's largest domain registrar in a potentially massive new market.
- International expansion accelerated by Airo Care's multilingual AI support (50+ markets, 20 languages), reducing the cost and complexity of serving non-English markets and enabling more aggressive growth in underpenetrated regions.
- Strategic partnerships with LegalZoom and Cloudflare, and the potential to leverage GoDaddy's proprietary small business data ('Small Street' index), can drive ecosystem expansion and new customer acquisition.

Threats

- Ongoing securities law investigation by Kaplan Fox & Kilsheimer LLP into promotional domain pricing disclosures, combined with the FTC data security order, creates legal, financial, and reputational overhang.
- Intense competition from Shopify, Wix, Squarespace, Hostinger, and Cloudflare in web presence and hosting markets could compress margins and accelerate market share erosion, particularly in the SMB segment.
- Rising Verisign registry fees (from $10.26 to $10.97 effective Nov 26) increase input costs and could dampen customer demand for domain registrations.
- Rapid AI evolution by well-capitalized competitors (including large cloud providers entering the SMB space) could commoditize GoDaddy's AI offerings before they achieve scale, while the Universal Terms of Service reclassification risks customer dissatisfaction and churn.

Earnings Call - Q1 2026

04/30/26 | WarrenAI

- Q1 26 revenue grew 6% YoY to $1.3B (high end of guidance), with EPS of $1.60 beating the $1.52 forecast by 5.26% and normalized EBITDA of $414M up 13% with 210bps margin expansion to 33%.
- Free cash flow grew 15% to $474M; trailing 12-month FCF reached $1.68B, with full-year 26 FCF target of ~$1.8B reaffirmed, keeping the company on track to exceed its 20% FCF CAGR North Star.
- Full-year 26 revenue guidance reaffirmed at $5.195B–$5.275B (~6% growth); Q2 26 revenue guided at $1.285B–$1.305B (6% growth), with normalized EBITDA margin of ~33% for both Q2 and full year.

Bullish Highlights

- A&C segment revenue grew 12% YoY to ~$500M with 45% EBITDA margins (up 110bps); A&C ARR grew 10% and now represents ~40% of total business, demonstrating successful pivot to higher-margin services.
- Airo cohorts show high-teens percentage growth in cumulative annual spend and ~30% faster second-product attachment versus non-Airo cohorts; customers spending >$500 annually represent ~10% of the base with ARPU of $246 (up 9%).
- Airo Care improved resolution rates by ~50% in initial tests and equalized English/non-English performance (>150% improvement in non-English markets), now deployed across 50+ markets and 20 languages.
- AI-native commerce Airo sales agent delivered conversion rates comparable to human-assisted sales for smaller leads, with plans to scale throughout 26; AI now generates the majority of code at GoDaddy.

Bearish Highlights

- Total bookings grew only 3% to $1.5B, reflecting promotional offer impact, .co registry contract expiration, and lapping of prior-year aftermarket strength; A&C bookings grew 9% but core platform bookings declined 1%.
- Core platform segment revenue grew only 3% to $769M, partially offset by softness in non-core hosting, .co registry expiration, and tougher aftermarket comparables.
- International revenue growth slowed to 7% from the prior 10–14% range, attributed to the absence of large aftermarket transactions that boosted the prior-year period.
- Stock declined 0.87% in aftermarket trading despite the EPS beat, reflecting cautious investor sentiment around near-term bookings deceleration and the stock's ~54% decline from its 52-week high.

Q&A Highlights

- On customer quality: Management defines high-intent customers by activation and attachment of additional products post-domain purchase, with multi-product adoption predicting strong renewal rates—a key metric guiding promotional strategy decisions.
- On ANS competitive advantage: CEO Bhutani explained that GoDaddy's right to win stems from linking agent registries to DNS (the internet's one universal directory), making domain names central to agent identity and trust—directly benefiting the world's largest registrar.
- On Airo AI Builder monetization: The $10M+ ARR includes only subscriptions and AI credits, with cross-sell of other GoDaddy products not yet included; pricing tiers (free/starter/professional/ultimate) are set, with paid marketing ramping over the next 2–3 quarters.
- On AI traffic impact: Management noted some search traffic impact from AI mode but offset it through improved conversion; GoDaddy is developing APIs to ensure its services are accessible to AI agents as customer journeys increasingly begin in AI interfaces.

Misses

- Total bookings growth of 3% was below expectations, with core platform bookings declining 1% YoY, reflecting the peak impact of the promotional domain strategy and .co registry expiration headwinds.
- ARR of $4.3B, while growing 6%, was noted by some analysts as missing estimates, suggesting challenges in securing longer-term customer commitments amid competitive pressures.
- Websites + Marketing upgrade pricing cannot be implemented until the new product achieves parity with the current version on key metrics like publish rates, leaving a key ARPU driver on hold for an indeterminate period in 26.
- Management declined to provide detailed unit economics for Airo AI Builder (subscription vs. credit mix, margin profile vs. legacy W+M), citing early-stage data, limiting investor ability to model the AI monetization trajectory.
